HOW THE RAILROADS

COME OFF THIS MORNING.

PROBABLY not less than 40,000 people thronged the streets yesterday morning to witness the grand civic and military parade of the Elks and citizens. Everybody was out in their uniforms and colors, and the protana band appeared at the head of the street. The members of the lodge in their purple and white tuxed suits presented a picturesque appearance, of sightseers was almost as imposing as the pageant itself. spirit of Elkdom pervaded the atnosphere; it was contagious and every one caught it. Cheer after cheer ng out for the boys in purple and GREAT ELKS' PARADE WILL

The parade was nearly four blicks in length, and was one of the most picesque that has been seen in the city. It was an Elk affair, and it was carried through in the manner that the Elks have a reputation of doing

From the starting point to the end of the line of march the sidewalks and streets were lined with masses of peoham street; countermarch at Brigham street and thence south on the west side of Main street to Fourth South street; thence west to West Temple street; north on West Temple street, where the parade will be dismissed. of march was filled with people of men, women and children. Nearly every one carried the Elk colors in some form or other, and the streets were a wilderness of flying ribbons and fancy decorations. A kaleidoscopic rainbow of every conceivable color was presented to the eye.

The parade itself was no less spectacular. The military organizations were out in force with their colors and pecceutrements, and the citizens did their part in the way of providing picturesque features.

Starting of the Parade.

The parade was, of course, late in starting, and it did not leave the organizing point until about 10 o'clock. The parade formed at Fagle Gate, and the line of march was south on State to line of march was south on State to fifth South street, thence west to Main and north on the east side of Main to South Temple, then counter-march on the west side of Main to Fourth South, thence west to West Temple and north bound for Salt Lake without an accident, and the fine of march was south on State to Fifth South street, thence west to Main to Fourth South, thence west to West Temple, then counter-march on South Temple, then counter-march on the West solde of Main to Fourth South, thence west to West Temple and north to First South, where the parade was dismissed. The entire distance was dismissed. The entire distance was so crowded that it was with difficulty that the mounted police could get to televate the mounted on horses. Following these came Grand Marshal Sam C. Park of the National Guard, and his aldes section of police led by Chief Paul, all mounted on horses. Following these came Grand Marshal Sam C. The local lodge of Elks attired in their natty uniforms of white and purple came next and the boys were cheered all along the line. Following them came a number of visiting Elks wearing gray linen dusters.

Mayor and City Council.

Mayor Thompson and the city coun-il members followed in carriages, eading the section of city organiza-ions. First of these came the veteran iremen in their bright red shirts and ranging with them the famous old charging with them the famous old hand engine which saved many a house from being burned to the ground in the early days when steam fire engines were unknown upon the western plains. "Any badges to trade? Fill give you one of my lodge for one of yours?"
The cry was heard last night on all sides. Every Elk—every visitor—every friend of an Elk, has a determination to return home laden with the badge of every lodge in attendance. TWO MORE ARE DUE TODAY

ALL THE VISITORS ARE BEING WELL TAKEN CARE OF.

The trains that rolled into Salt Lake yesterday brought about 3,900 more Elks and visitors to the city. This practically completes the list of arrivals, although several hundred will probably get in in detached, bunches today. About eight special trains came in during the day and cach one was well filled. One train alone bore 1,600 visitors, which is the largest delegation to arrive. Two more trains are expected to arrive this morning bearing the Ogden and Parts (City lodges.

The arrivals yesterday make the visiting population now about 12,000 at a conservative estimate. This number is far smaller than was expected by the focal lodge, but the fact that more did not come is attributed to the great distance they have to travel to reach here. As some one expressed it, Salt Lake is an oasis in a desert that is entirely too wide for many of those living on the outer edges of the country to travel across it.

Although the attendance is not what was expected. The cretainly one of the job in the fact that more did not come is attributed to the great privilege, as the chief and probably get in in detached bunches today.
